Too much noise!

I-93 neighbors seek noise barriers, relief

By Brian Davidson

When Kate Rickards' 4-year-old son ran across the street in front of their Starwood Crossing home last week, she couldn't yell loud enough to stop him.

"He said, 'Mommy, I couldn't hear you.'"

Rickards and others who live in the Sanborn School district near I-93 say the roar of highway traffic has been deafening for decades. About 150 residents from the neighborhood Tuesday demanded that a sound barrier finally be built along I-93 from Dascomb Road to Interstate 495 at a public forum with state Sen. Susan Tucker (D-Andover) and representatives from the Massachusetts Highway Department and the Executive Office of Transportation. Tucker vowed to file legislation calling for the barrier, telling residents she will immediately work to secure design money, agreeing that the barrier is long overdue.

"All I really wanted to hear tonight is why nothing has happened," said Hansom Road resident Stan Riemer.

When MassHighway decided to open the breakdown lane during rush hours on a section of I-93 between Interstate 495 and Route 125 almost a decade ago, a study determined that a sound barrier was justified there. Now, the only thing that seems to be in the breakdown lane is the sound barrier project itself.

"We want to get this done," said Rickards. "We don't want to hear yes, yes, yes, and then get nothing."

John Fallon, a Mass Highway representative, said the delay to hush the I-93 traffic for Andover residents was actually due to a corridor study done by the Merrimack Valley Planning Commission meant to determine what improvements to

Selectmen looking at town vehicle use

By Alison McGonagle

Rather than buy a new truck for parks and grounds superintendent Randy Pickersgill, as proposed by director of plant and facilities Joe Piantedosi, the Board of Selectmen recommended replacing his 2000 GMC pickup with the 2002 Chevy Silverado pickup formerly belonging to the late Ken Parker, former building superintendent.

Piantedosi had requested that the town buy Pickersgill a 2006 Chevy Colorado two weeks ago, when the selectmen voted to defer making the decision until Monday night, at a meeting where changes to the town's vehicle use policy were discussed.

Piantedosi was not in agreement with the board's recommendation to transfer Parker's former vehicle to Pickersgill, as he felt it would be difficult for Pickersgill, emotionally.

Going forward — Selectmen have decided that all town vehicles will be clearly designated with appropriate plates and markings on the doors. This seal (above) is on the windows of several town trucks.

Lyman defended the recommendation. She said the board may consider transferring vehicles around so that a new one need not be purchased, and no employee need feel uncomfortable.

Overall, the new policy's goal aims to save money, energy, and reduce town insurance liability by implementing use regulations and vehicle standards.

"The price of gas [that the town pays] is around $2.68 per gallon, and with gas going up, the need [to reduce vehicle and energy costs] is greater than ever," said Selectman Mary Lyman.

Monday night, the board voted on one of the policy's points that dictates that 13 town

"IT'S ALL ABOUT THE KIDS..."

15 local teens helping New Orleans

By Judy Wakefield

FROM THE STEPS OF A NEW ORLEANS duplex that most of the 15 teens from Andover had just gutted, Bill Fahey of Andover Youth Services talked from a cellphone during a lunch break Tuesday afternoon about the impact the trip will have on these youths for the rest of their lives.

"It's not easy but these kids are bringing life back to a neighborhood," he said. "It's been emotional, and very powerful, but also rewarding... this 87-year-old homeowner (of the duplex) came by and was so grateful because the kids carefully stored some Hummels and jewelry they found... it was gifts from his kids and it was important to him."

Last Thursday, one week ago, a team of 15 Andover teens flew to New Orleans after paying $475 each to take part in this unique, eight-day Youth Services summer trip. They come back tomorrow, Friday, Aug. 11. Fahey said teen interest was terrific in town as some kids were put on a wait list. Each participant had to answer this question:

Citing the limitations of summertime, the youth center subcommittee has decided to hold off until next month to begin holding public information sessions and studying traffic patterns for the proposed youth center.

See you in September

By Alison McGonagle

...That's what town officials are saying when it comes to advancing the cause of a youth center. Partly due to seasonal limitations, the youth center subcommittee will begin conducting traffic studies, and holding public information sessions in September.

The subcommittee includes Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, Selectmen John Hess and Brian Major, Andover Community Services Director Mary Donohue, Andover Youth Foundation director Jerry Silverman, and Senior Center Director Kathy Urquhart.

The group met last Thursday evening to discuss progress on the project.

The plan to build a youth center on town-owned land in West Andover, near the Ledge

New Interstate 93 interchange

How much relief for the Vale?

By Colin Steele

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski wants an independent review of a traffic study that says a new Interstate 93 interchange would reduce congestion in Ballardvale neighborhoods.

Andover residents and officials have questioned the traffic study, wondering if it overestimates the relief an interchange would provide to Ballardvale.

The study has also faced criticism because it did not include Route 125 in Andover, which residents fear could see more traffic.

"I'd like to put an end to that questioning," Stapczynski said yesterday, after a meeting about the proposed interchange.

Representatives from Andover, Tewksbury and Wilmington met at the Tewksbury Public Library to discuss their plans for and concerns about the project. They agreed to create a master plan to lay out their vision for Lowell Junction, the area between Route 125 and Dascomb Road. The state is now reviewing a report by the Merrimack Valley Planning Commission that says the three towns need a new interchange to reduce traffic in residential areas and open up new properties for development.

There are three design options up for consideration. The traffic study included in the commission's report says the new interchange could cut rush-hour traffic in Ballardvale by as much as 39 percent.

John Boese, who lives on Gray Road off Route 125 in Andover, favors an independent review of the traffic study. He, like many of his neighbors, worries that the I-93 interchange and new Lowell Junction development will put more cars on Route 125.

"Since 125 is the connector between 114 and 93, it should have been included (in the traffic study)," he said.

Gaylord Burke, executive director of the Planning Commission, told Stapczynski the state has reviewed the study and the Federal Highway Administration will as well. After the meeting, Stapczynski called that news "encouraging."

Andover will host the next interchange meeting Oct. 12. Between now and then, the three towns' planning directors will start putting together a master plan. Such a plan will reduce the "anxiety" that people have over the uncertain future of Lowell Junction, said Chris Huntress, chairman of Andover's interchange task force.

"It would give all three towns a sense of comfort," he said.

Wilmington Planning Director Carole Hamilton proposed that the master plan include crethe highway needed to be made.

"A unique situation happened," said Fallon. "We were made aware of a pending study, and we didn't know what the recommendations of the study would be."

Fallon said MassHighway was unwilling to install noise barriers along I-93 near the Andover homes because the MVPC study was considering - and ultimately recommended - adding one lane for through traffic there in each direction.

If they had put the barriers up, he said, the widening of the highway may have required taking them back down.

If Mass Highway approves the recommendation to widen the section of I-93, the new lanes would not be added for about another 5 years, according to Tony Komornick, MVPC transportation Residents said that is too far down the road to wait.

"Petition through your elected officials," Fallon urged residents.

"Say that you want barriers in there now because the implementation of the corridor study is too far in the future. That's all I can leave you with tonight."

Proponents of a noise barrier along Interstate 93 in Andover put fliers on cars outside Memorial Hall Library during a public forum on the issue Tuesday, Aug. 8.

Selectmen setting policy

■ TOWN VEHICLE USE

vehicles be designated as such with municipal plates, and a town seal.

Four vehicles, those used by police and fire chiefs, police lieutenant, and the town manager, are exempt from this policy, as their vehicles are designated for both business and personal use.

The measure passed, and going forward all town vehicles will be outfitted with the appropriate plates and markings on the doors, according to Lyman.

"The next step is for [Selectman Alex Vispoli] and I to work out clarifying liability and stipend issues and reimbursement," said Lyman, who says she and Vispoli, as the subcommittee working on the revision, are taking "baby steps."

"The town manager is supposed to come up with implementation plans. He's on vacation now, but will be back in two weeks with a plan on how to do the markings, and what our next step will be. We plan to talk with department heads."

Lyman said the process is slow going because they need to put many expectations formally in writing, as well as make changes.

PAST AND PRESENT

Pearson Street: Hats off to the man who kept his powder dry

The Townsmen incorrectly reported in a story last week (Aug. 3, 2006) that Pearson Street was named after the founder of Butler Bank. The bank is currently renovating the former Friendly's site on North Main Street, near Pearson Street, and local history buffs want the record set straight. Butler Bank is touting the Pearson connection on its Web site with these words: "We are particularly happy to be increasing our presence at our new branch on the corner of Pearson Street, which bears the name of Butler Bank's founder, General Gardner Pearson."

Coincidence is all it is, as there is no connection between the name of the bank's founder and the street name.

Pearson Street was named after the first headmaster of Phillips Academy and the founder of Andover Theological Seminary — Eliphalet Pearson, who died in 1826.

"His contributions to town were very important," said Julie Mofford of the Andover Historical Society. "Another town historian — Bernice Haggerty — caught this and called here."

He is remembered in town history books as "brusque and hot-tempered," Mofford said. But he was also a scientific genius who graduated from Harvard University and is credited with making gunpowder for the Patriot Army during the Revolution.

"He was a chemist. He got the gunpowder to (George) Washington who was in Cambridge at the time... he made that gunpowder at a mill on the corner of Stevens Street, where those new condos (Powder Mill) are...there is a marker on Stevens Street about this," Mofford said.

Phillips Academy has a building named after him. Pearson Hall is one of the oldest structures on campus and it currently houses the classics department. Like Butler Bank, Pearson Hall will soon be undergoing a renovation. PA trustees recently announced Pearson Hall will become a student center next year.

Depositing the facts on this correction was important, as there is interest!

First tri-town meeting between Wilmington, Tewksbury and Andover

Dream of a riverwalk could come true

By Alison McGonagle

WHILE IT MAY BE SEVERAL YEARS before Andover residents spend lazy afternoons strolling a riverfront park along the Shawsheen, town officials present at the first tri-town meeting between Wilmington, Tewksbury and Andover, the towns affected by a new Interstate 93 interchange, shared the vision early.

Town Planning Director Paul Materazzo said that those holding stakes are on board "for pulling together and working with the three communities to help plan an overlay district so all three communities benefit equally."

An overlay district, according to Materazzo, deals with zoning. Particularly, the task force is looking for uniform zoning so that no one community ends up with all the housing, or all the commerce once an interchange plan is chosen.

Also, an overlay district would save planners time so that "potential proponents" would not need to go through each of the three towns to gain approval for a project.

The town's best case scenario is a riverfront park, according to Bob Douglas, conservation commission director.

Douglas described the proposed park as two large ballfields, possibly for soccer, and parking areas. He also said that up close to the waterway would be walkways and canoe launches.

Even in this proposal stage, there are setbacks. All property necessary to make the plan come to life is not yet acquired.

The ongoing negotiations between Reichold Chemical and the town will be a key factor, as Reichold is responsible for cleaning up the last parcel of their former business site.

The cleanup and sale of the land is under negotiation, according to Douglas.

Some of the necessary land belongs to Andover Village Improvement Society.

According to Andrew Girdwood, a member of the group, their involvement thus far has been limited, but only because AVIS does not hold trustee meetings during the summer months.

He said that the group would support such an initiative, and that he looks forward to getting the details.

Susan Stott, involved in the plan both as an AVIS trustee, and a member of Open Spaces, emphasizes the infancy of the project.

"We've pushed this idea," Stott said. "The environmental interests have gotten together to see if they can speak with one voice. We've just begun to talk. The [Interstate] 93 interchange is in early stages, and the task force has all interests represented. AVIS has a reservation that is accessible by water. Those conversations are just beginning. We are figuring out who the stakeholders are, and what their interests are."

Materazzo said that his next step is to meet with the planners of all three towns to talk about identifying funding sources, processes, steps to put the create the overlay district.

The tri-town meeting will resume on Oct. 12, at 8 a.m. at a location to be announced here in Andover.

"I can see the issue coming in to play as the three towns meet over the course of the next several years, but in talking with a number of stake holders, they are on board for pulling together and working with the three communities to make a riverfront park," Materazzo said.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski shares in Materazzo's enthusiasm. He says a river walk has always been something on Andover's wish list.

"It's more of a notion, a concept, than a plan," said Stapczynski. "There's no plan. This is a concept. It's something we'd like to see all along the river."

ation of an "overlay district" in Lowell Junction. The district would have one set of rules and regulations, so developers would not have to deal with three different sets of bylaws in three towns. Huntress called the overlay district an "excellent idea."

The master plan would also include what the towns want in terms of economic development, housing and other projects.

Planning Director Paul Materazzo has suggested building a riverwalk with trails and other recreational activities along the Shawsheen River in Andover, and a park-and-ride lot or commuter rail station could also be part of the plans. Some sort of transportation hub would make the project more favorable to state and federal officials, said Robert Halpin, president of the Merrimack Valley Economic Development Council.

Police say workers may be to blame for theft of computers from Shawsheen Elementary

By Colin Steele

Police are investigating a private work crew in connection with last week's theft of $15,000 worth of computers from Shawsheen Elementary School.

Principal Moira O'Brien reported the theft last week, and Officer James Moses is investigating.

He has a list of outside workers who were in the building this summer, Sgt. Cecelia Blais said.

"The officer's looking into some contracting work that was being done in the school," Blais said.

The stolen equipment — 10 Dell laptops, two Toshiba laptops and scanners — was put away for the summer but not locked up, police said.

They were last seen July 5.

In light of the theft, the School Department may review its procedures for storing computers over the summer, Superintendent Claudia Bach said.

But "we would never be able to put under lock and key all the things someone would want," she said.

Bach is looking into the town's insurance policy to see if it will cover the cost of replacing the computers.

"This is the first time in my time here that we've had something like this," she said.

"We have, by and large, very trustworthy people who work and are contracted to come in — and they are supervised."

Teachers used the laptops for special education and classroom instruction, O'Brien said.

One of the scanners belonged to the library, where it was used to check books out, she said.

Big Easy: 15 local teens head down to help

■ AYS: KATRINA RELIEF

tion: Who are you and why are you going?

"Responses were great. It's just a great group of kids who really care about people. That's who is here," Fahey said.

They are working to save homes in the upper 9th Ward in New Orleans. Houses damaged by Hurricane Katrina must be gutted by Aug. 27 or the government will take them by eminent domain.

For sanitary reasons, any houses taken by the government will be bulldozed, Fahey said.

The Andover team, which also includes five chaperones in addition to Fahey, is working with Common Ground Relief and gutting many homes. Homeowners want to keep their homes, but they are too old, too sick or have no money for gutting their properties.

"People are worn down; tools are worn down," Fahey said, as a truck with armed guards passed the duplex while he was on the cellphone. "It's a disaster area, and there's a vacant church near us. It's just a very powerful experience."

The singing and smiles from those 15 Andover teens gutting houses is breathing new life into a very tired neighborhood. It's been almost a year since the devastating hurricane hit New Orleans.

"It's a lot to take in as it's one gigantic mess here," said Paul Caradonna, one of the Andover teens in New Orleans. "I just can't even fathom what I would do if this ever happened to my parent's house in Andover."

He's been without a TV and air conditioning, sleeping on a cot in a very crowded school gymnasium. But he's also watched a few kids nearby finally come outside to a beat-up hoop at a closed-down school to play basketball with the Andover teens. That has been a good feeling for the Andover contingent because the local kids haven't laughed or smiled in a long time.

"We're working at a good pace and working to the max," Caradonna said. "Seeing the kids so happy when we play basketball is just a great thing to Preparing for their trip — The Andover teens taking part in the rebuilding project in New Orleans were required to take a team-building workshop before they left town. The facilitator was Joe Cotright-Clark, who focused on the purpose of the trip and also made sure participants got to know each other. These photos are scenes from the workshop. The teens are now in the 9th Ward neighborhood of New Orleans, helping people salvage their homes. The local teens on the trip include Paul Caradonna, Peter Rundquist, Lauren Miller, Greg Cook, Maureen Gaj, Jovany Santos, Adrienne Culver, Avery MacKenzie, Ellis Henigan, Brittany Peck, Adam Rice, John Beroni, Eric Walter-Grant, Jake Gostanian and Ryan Chardiak. The chaperones also on the trip are Bill Fahey, Pete Zetlan, Becky Parks, Patrick Sullivan, Kevin Hess and Sloan McColley.

Andover Youth Foundation director Jerry Silverman was one of the participants at last Thursday's meeting of the youth center subcommittee.

Road landfill has been abandoned. The group is moving forward in plans to house the center at the Doherty Middle School site, right next to Town Offices, according to Silverman.

"Things to do" on the committee's list include, first, chalking the building's footprint on the property to give residents an idea of what the building will look like, then conducting a parking and traffic study in September, when students are back in school, and parents are back on the roads during applicable hours, and finally, finalizing plans for the building itself, which may include underground storage and restroom facilities, and restrooms to accommodate outdoor weekend programming possibilities.

Silverman also said the aerial view of the project, complete with the building's footprint, will be made available online for residents to view, and comment on interactively.

The public information session will feature a presentation of the project by Silverman, and an opportunity for residents to offer questions or issues early on in the development of further plans. Silverman said he believes much of the data collected for the proposed senior center applies to the proposed youth center.

"I don't think the infrastructure will cause a problem," Stappczynski said, referring to the project's effect on parking and traffic in the area.

"I think it's a good idea to hold meetings with the public and make sure there's support for the project before we go forward," said Hess.

The group plans to set public meeting dates for mid-September, at their next subcommittee meeting Aug. 31 at 6:30 p.m.

They can't take it anymore

FOR YEARS, the roar of highway noise has been building in the Sanborn School area, neighbors say, and they have had enough. They are roaring back.

It is a quality-of-life issue, the neighbors contend. As the volume of traffic from New Hampshire to Boston has increased, so too has the noise polluting the neighborhoods west of Lovejoy and Greenwood roads.

Packing into Memorial Hall Library on Tuesday night, the neighbors had the ear of state Sen. Sue Tucker and Highway Department officials, urging them to get going on soundproofing the highway corridor, which some say is more than 10 years overdue.

The state has been waiting, officials explain, for the plans to improve and widen the interstate to be finalized first. At a cost of $4 million per mile of soundproofing, they want to be absolutely sure where the much-needed three miles of barrier wall would be placed – permanently.

Tucker assured her constituents that she will soon file legislation to get a sound barrier erected along the interstate in Andover. Going after the design money first, she is optimistic that the neighbors will see positive, quieter results, working in partnership with Andover's legislators and the next governor.

Right now, for homeowners who can't even hear themselves think if they happen to be standing outdoors – let alone sleep with the windows open – that remains a very sweet midsummer night's dream.

Web question

Do you support ballot Question 1: To buy wine in grocery stores?

Last week's Townsmen Web-site question was: How do you think Andover town vehicles should be marked? 41 people responded.

- 8 people, or 20 percent, said, "A permanent town seal on the door."
- 1 person, or 2 percent, said, "A removable town seal on the door."
- 6 people, or 15 percent, said, "Permanent 'Town of Andover' lettering."
- 18 people, or 44 percent, said, "Permanent 'Town of Andover' lettering and a town seal."
- 1 person, or 2 percent, said, "A sticker placed in the window of the vehicle."
- 4 people, or 10 percent, said, "The cars shouldn't be marked."

- 3 people, or 7 percent, said, "Whatever is least expensive, the car costs enough."
- No one said, "Government plates only," or "Other."

This week's Townsmen Web-site question is: If Massachusetts voters say "Yes" to Question 1 (see story in BUSINESS, page 21, in this issue), where will you buy your wine?

- I will continue to buy wine at our local liquor stores; we need to support our local businesses.

- Buying wine at the grocery store will save time and money. This should have been allowed years ago.

Memories of a Poms Pond summer survivor

Editor, Townsmen:

Reading Bill Dalton's column on Poms Pond brought back my memories of Poms Pond in the 1950s.

In 1950, when I was 6 years old, my mother enrolled me in the swimming program at Poms Pond. The program began first thing in the morning when the air and water temperatures were at their coldest. It was torture for me to get into the water. The bottom of the pond was all goopy and squishy motivating me to master the doggy paddle in record time so I didn't have to put my feet on the bottom.

In the mid-1950's, the Mickey Mouse Club's Spin and Marty show was popular and featured Annette Funicello attending summer camp at an upscale dude ranch. I had just become a Girl Scout and learned that whomever sold the most cookies would earn a two-week stay at a Girl Scout camp on Poms Pond (Camp Maude Eaton). I was determined to sell the most cookies so I could go to camp and I did!

However, when I got to the camp, it was nothing like the one in the Spin and Marty show. It was very primitive with campers sleeping six to a tent.

At the camp, mornings began early with swimming classes when temperatures were in the '60s. We were assigned colored bathing caps that signified our level of proficiency. It was humiliating to have a beginner's cap, however, I don't think I advanced beyond the doggy paddle that summer either. The water was too cold so I spent as little time in the water as possible. When my two weeks were up, I was relieved to go home.

Some people don't learn from their mistakes. The next year, I was swept up in selling Girl Scout cookies and again won top prize. I liked to win!

So back I went for my second year at Camp Maude Eaton. My second year experience was much like the first. I think I did manage to swim better and to advance to a more respectable bathing cap color. I never went back to swim in Poms Pond after my second camp stay.

When my daughters were learning to swim in the 1970s, Andover had a swimming program using private pools around town. They had a much better swimming experience than I had at Poms Pond.

ALL THOSE YEARS AGO

100 Years Ago – 1906

Many cases of typhoid fever are reported in town.

Shortly after 1 o'clock today, two children were badly scalded at their home on Pearson Street, a boiler filled with hot water overturning on them while they were playing on the floor of the kitchen.

The poultry owners residing on Salem Street are up in arms over the arrival of a weasel, which has been destroying some of the choice fowl in their coops. George Foster is reported to be the heaviest loser, about 50 of his best chickens having been killed.

Warren L. Johnson who fell from a ladder and through the greenhouses, seriously injuring his ankle, is able to be around a little and hopes to attend to business in two weeks.

Hargraves' circus will visit Andover on Monday evening, Aug. 20, and will be located on the Playstead. The show visited here two years ago and gave excellent satisfaction.

It was a very happy crowd that left the square in five special electric cars last Saturday morning for Revere Beach; it being the annual picnic of the employees of Tyer Rubber Co.

The fraternal life at Phillips Academy is ever on the increase and for this reason new clubhouses are being erected by the alumni and students who belong to these societies.

Thomas Bentley conducted his 30th annual fishing trip to Swampscott last Saturday, and it was one of the most successful that has been held for a long time.

75 Years Ago – 1931

An unusual accident occurred Thursday, July 30 about 5:30 p.m., when an automobile was caught by a descending pair of railroad gates at the Ballardvale crossing, with the result that one of the uprights went through the top of the driver's machine, striking him in the forehead.

Resident citizens' sporting licenses issued since January first of this year up to July 20, total 177, according to the records of George H. Winslow, town clerk. Of that number, six are for women.

Fierce flames aided by a high wind, completely destroyed the storehouse of the Watson-Park Co., a chemical concern at Lowell Junction, early today, in the worst and most spectacular fire that has occurred in Andover in the past decade.

Jeremiah Cronin, Ballardvale railroad crossing tender, undoubtedly saved the life of a local man on Thursday morning, Aug. 6, when he pushed him from in front of the Boston-bound express.

Mrs. George Petrie and daughters Ella and Ina have returned to their home on Chickering Court after enjoying the sea breezes at Hampton Beach for a week.

The six-mile stretch of three-lane highway called the by-pass, running northeasterly from the Andover-Reading road to North Andover and the Salem turnpike, was finally opened for traffic last Saturday afternoon.

Summer camps have a strong attraction for Andover boys and girls, and this year perhaps a stronger attraction, for more local people are at camp than have been for some time.

Two new additions to the faculty and seven changes in residence of faculty members will be in effect with the beginning of the new school term at Phillips academy when sessions start on Sept. 15, it has been announced.

Pickering 20 to 25 inches; bass 18 to 22 inches overall; brown trout 20 inches; brook trout 15 inches; white and yellow perch over a foot long; horned pout and crappies 15 inches in length! It's not the echo of a group of fishermen gathered around a stove swapping lies on a winter's night, nor the wild dream of a confirmed disciple of Izaak Walton, but merely the dimensions of some of the more than a million fish stocked in ponds and streams in Massachusetts this spring and summer by Division of Fish and Game of the Department of Conservation.

Damage of $3,000 was done to the home and farmhouse of Sam Bagdasarian, sometimes known as Carkis Kolmbosgian, on Argilla Road, by fire last Monday morning, Aug. 10, according to Chief Charles F. Emerson of the Andover Fire Department after an investigation. The chief said that the fire, which burned out practically the whole first floor of the living quarters of the one-and-a-half-story house, was probably caused by one of the children playing with matches.

On a wet and slippery field, the St. Augustine's Trojans and the Methodist class team battled to a 7-7 score at the Andover Playstead last Friday evening.

Motorists of Massachusetts will face an increase of from 6 to 10 percent in their compulsory insurance rates for next year.

Average daily milk production per cow for all cows as reported by many New England dairymen on Aug. 1, 1931 was 12.8 percent below

Dish owners Lea Savely and Amy Aycok, both of Andover, bopped to the music and danced with their spatulas. Optimum Sportswear donated T-shirts and water bottles, while spinning Selectman Ted Teichert served as master of ceremonies, handling the music.

"It's all about coming out and having fun with our guests. We do this every year and it gets bigger and bigger and we love to see that," D'Innocenzo said.

Not just any seeds – Andover Seeds

Heirloom seed and bulb business has owners seeing gold while neighbors see only weeds

By Alison McGonagle

As a business, Andover Seeds, brainchild of greenery enthusiasts Heather Stockham and Mark Santangelo, is just budding, while Santangelo's interest in plants is a seed that's been germinating since his youth.

Santangelo is an Andover native, musician, and full-time gardener. But he doesn't plant your average bulbs – he gardens heirloom and organic, specializing in seeds. That's where Stockham comes in. She's a full-time employee at Wild Oats where she keeps things cooking in the kitchen, but when she's not at the store, she's busy gardening and marketing for Andover Seeds.

The business grew out of an initial idea to sell heirloom seeds online, where the two, coincidentally, met. Stockham came up with the idea to sell the seeds on a Web site, and market as a business – complete with business cards and eventually, they hope, a catalog.

The property is about an acre on Kirkland Drive, where Santangelo lives with his parents. The neighborhood is marked by perfectly manicured lawns, and trimmed hedges – that is, until you reach the Santangelo home.

Santangelo planted his first patch of carrots, after being inspired by the very large carrots grown by his Sicilian grandparents. From there, his – and plants – spread across the yard like, well, weeds.

"Man gave the term 'weeds' to plants," Stockham said.

"There is no such thing as a weed," said Santangelo, as they walked through the yard, examining the many wild, organic plants.

This is not your average garden, Stockham said. She brings compost from the Wild Oats juice bar to the property, and after filling a 10-foot-deep hole with the compost, a very large pumpkin vine is growing out of it.

While neither of the gardeners are professionally trained in horticulture, Santangelo has extensively studied plants on his own, he says. Stockham became interested after she had a simple garden at her previous home in Utah, and she maintained that interest when she came to North Andover three years ago.

Also growing on the property are blackberries, blueberries, raspberries, pears, mint, tomatoes, peaches and many more plants, a lot of them heirlooms. There are even some roses that poke up here and there.

While right now the business is not exactly booming, the pair hope that after some organization of the property, they will begin making some profit next year. Right now they report that they are just breaking even. Their costs include Web site space, packaging, and business cards.

This year, Stockham said, Mother Nature packed a powerful punch.

"The flood was awful," said Stockham. "We lost a lot of plants. The whole yard was under water."

She said that while she and Santangelo do not use any chemicals, during the flood much of the chemical products used by others in the neighborhood washed over into their yard, killing some chicory and black-eyed Susans.

Santangelo said that he does not trust chemical lawn products, because they are not organic, and people do not know the effects of the products on the soil.

"ChemLawn is evil," said Santangelo. "It's the enemy."

Speaking of soil, while digging in various parts of the yard, the two report finding many interesting layers of soil, including some blue clay, and under that, some beach sand.

Predictably, Santangelo says his lawn-conscious neighbors do not all feel the same way as he does about his ongoing project.

"They don't get the living from the ground thing," he said, pointing out that he can easily identify many edible plants in his yard, as opposed to the toxic yew bushes across the street.

Stockham said even the Board of Health once got involved with the project, sending letters, and asking for the removal of a Dumpster that was once on the property, and airing concerns about standing water with relation to mosquitoes.

She also said neighbors often raise the concern that their property values are compromised by the Santangelo garden.

"We're very concerned about the condition of the yard affecting the value of our property," said neighbor Barbara Kennedy, who has lived on Kirkland Drive since 1977, and says she and her husband are ready to move on to a 55-and-over community. She says specifically, she dislikes the piles of rocks, and also the buckets, which collect rain and attract mosquitoes.

"It's been this way for about 12 years. I would love to move in a year or two."

Kennedy said that a real-estate agent confirmed her concern about property value decrease.

Stockham and Santangelo plan to clean up the area, turning over the soil, and organizing in time for next planting season. It's part of their business growth plan.

"We want to take the trees down," said Santangelo of some changes he'd like to make to spruce up the area.

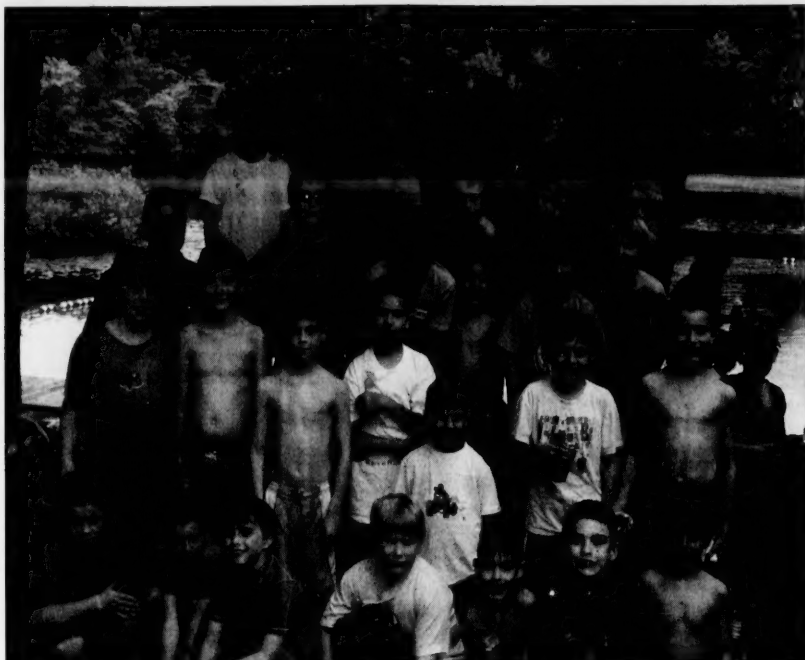

"When you only have an acre to work with, you want to maximize what you have."

Mark Santangelo shows that his business growth plan produces results, such as this squash plant.

Cub Scout Pack 77 looks ahead to more fun in the fall

Cub Scout Pack 77 members celebrated the end of their program season with a picnic at Berry Pond in Harold Parker State Forest this summer. "The boys worked hard this year and we like to show our appreciation to them with an end-of-the-season party," explained Cubmaster Dan Jacavano. The day was warm and sunny and the boys and their families enjoyed swimming, games, and lots of food and drink.

"Our June picnic is a great way for the families to unwind at the end of the school year, relax, and reflect on all the fun we've had," he said.

Cool water temperature didn't stop Bear Cub Scout Tim Sorota from enjoying a dip in Berry Pond. He noted that the picnic was full of fun and adventure, "but mostly adventure!"

In addition to rank advancement and awards, the boys performed community-service projects this year ranging from picking up debris in the AVIS lands to raking leaves for their organizational sponsor, West Parish Church. The boys also marched in the Memorial Day parade.

Wolf Cub Scout Miles Branscombe's favorite event was the camp-in at the Boston Museum of Science. "We got to play with dominoes and try out origami!"

Assistant Cubmaster Keith Kessler explained that the camp-ins are the most popular activity the pack does. "Next year we plan to return to Battleship Cove where the boys and their parents will sleep on the Battleship USS Massachusetts."

Wolf Cub Scout Spencer Wright didn't hesitate to share what he loves about the program, "I like Cub Scouts because you get to go camping in the woods!" Indeed, Pack 77 camped outside in the spring at Camp Carpenter in Londonderry, N.H. "I think we picked the only weekend in May that wasn't wet!" said Assistant Cubmaster Carter Welch. "The boys and their families had a great time at the bonfire where the boys performed skits, sang songs, and told jokes."

During the summer, pack leadership passed to Bob Branscombe as Cubmaster and Jody Blatman as Pack committee chairman.

For information about joining Cub Scout Pack 77, contact Blatman at 978-837-6617.

dreds of trees, and power was gone for days and in some areas more than a week. Men working with handsaws took several days to clear trees to make roads passable. Many of the trees lost were stately old maples and elms.

Town officials quickly allocated $25,000 for "rehabilitation" (more than $330,000 dollars in today's money). The wind blew the roof off the Tyer Rubber building, scattering bricks and girders onto Lewis Street, according to Andover, A Century of Change (Eleanor Motley Richardson, published for the Andover Historical Society by the Andover Townsman, 1995). There are a number of pictures in Andover, What It Was, What It Is (published by the Andover Townsman, 1946), with these words, "And the wind blew - about 4 in the afternoon of what had started out as a nice quiet September day, the fire department was called because some wires had fallen near Shawsheen Road - then Hell broke loose, and in one awesome night hundreds of trees went down with little regard to where they fell - and once again the quiet little Shawsheen went off on a mighty rampage. This was the hurricane of 1938." The pictures show a horse-drawn milk wagon in flooded Shawsheen, trees on housing structures, and the collapse of part of the large retaining wall, between the Punchard House and Main Street (across the street from where Friendly's was later built).

As the hurricane moved north, it killed 13 people in New Hampshire and seven in Vermont. It caused a calamitous fire in Peterborough, N.H., damaged the Cog Railway on Mount Washington and buildings in Maine, and destroyed fruit orchards on both sides of the Canadian border.

In all, 275 million trees were destroyed in New England, including one third of Vermont's sugar maples. Tens of thousands of livestock were killed. The Associated Press reported the next day, "The greens and commons of New England will never be the same. Picture-postcard mementos of the oldest part of the United States are gone with the wind and flood. The day of the 'biggest wind' has just passed and a great part of the most picturesque America, as old as the Pilgrims, has gone beyond recall or replacement..."

BOOK REVIEW

Great Expectations

BY CHARLES DICKENS
Reviewed by John Chartier

This classic novel has certainly withstood the test of time, thanks in part to its unique plotline.

CLASSIC WORKS OF LITERATURE can be some of the most universal books, because they have stood the test of time. These books have touched readers across the countries of the world, and through countless generations. Great Expectations by Charles Dickens is one of these remarkable pieces, with characters who are realistic and a plot that is utterly original.

Pip is a poor orphan living with his sister and her husband in England. One night while visiting his parents' graves, he meets a criminal and his life is changed forever in ways he cannot even comprehend.

Meanwhile, Pip is invited by a wealthy woman, Miss Havisham, to play at her house. Pip meets Miss Havisham's adopted daughter, Estella, and he immediately falls in love with her. Estella will have nothing to do with Pip, though, and his modest upbringing.

Then, in an instant, Pip's life takes a sudden jolt when he inherits a fortune from an anonymous benefactor who wants to make sure he grows up to be a gentleman. Pip has no idea what kind of turns his life will take over the coming years, and how important his early life will really be.

Dickens is a gifted author, whose works like A Christmas Carol and A Tale of Two Cities are considered to be some of the best ever written. However, Great Expectations is one of, if not his best-written, works.

I recommend Great Expectations to readers who enjoy suspenseful novels or mystery stories. This book is truly a mix of the two types of literature, and it is that mix that really allows it to stand apart from other books of the same era.

I give Great Expectations by Charles Dickens a nine out of 10 rating. The description of the novel is extremely well developed, which makes the settings, characters, and situations all that much more realistic.

So head on down to your local bookstore or library today, and pick up your very own copy of Great Expectations by Charles Dickens.

Just remember, you never know how your actions today will impact someone later down the road.

Teacher, football and track coach, and School Committee member Richard "Dick" Collins pauses in the field house at Andover High School, which bears his name. Collins' third book has just been published.

On the publishing track

Collins' third book appeals to educational, athletic interests

By Brian Davidson

LONGTIME ANDOVER HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER AND winning football and track coach Richard "Dick" Collins can't seem to say enough about his experiences in Andover. Just ask his publisher.

Collins' third book, Education - Teaching - Coaching: The Realities, The Challenges, The Rewards, hit the shelves last week.

"Having taught at Andover High and Phillips Academy in the summers, I can say that the both schools can hold their heads very high."

RICHARD "DICK" COLLINS

"This is not an instruction manual for teachers and coaches," said Collins, who has already written such a book. "This is a book for anyone in the general public with an interest in coaching or education."

Collins, a 50-year history teacher and member of the Massachusetts Football Coaches and Track Coaches Hall of Fame, shares some of his richest memories in the classroom and on the field, and relates them to the art of effective instruction. He has seen countless examples of great teachers and coaches during his tenure in Andover, he said.

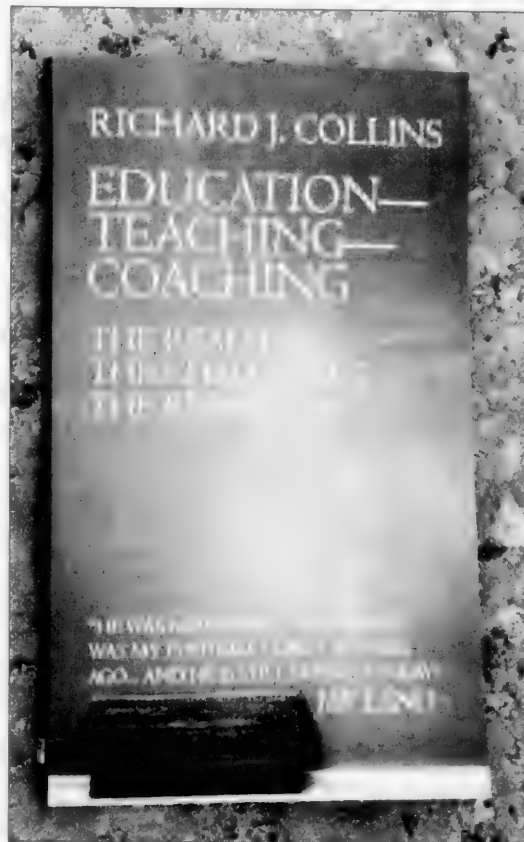

"I like to see education be perfect, but I'm not so naive as to think that it always will be," he said. "But having taught at Andover High and Phillips Academy in the summers, I can say that the both schools can hold their heads very high. I'm very proud to be associated with both of them."

Two chapters of the book are composed of eight articles written by local educators and coaches for whom Collins has great respect, providing readers with "a view from the front," he says.

Collins ends the book with a look back on some of his more humorous experiences at AHS, and also mentions a few of the many inspirational students and players he has had the privilege to mentor. One of his former football players, both humorous and inspirational, is late-night comedy show host Jay Leno, who "was probably the biggest clown our school ever produced, but never in a disrespectful way," notes Collins.

Leno called Collins when he heard he was writing the book, and offered to say a little something for the cover:

"He was motivating us when he was my football coach 40 years ago," Leno says of Collins. "And he is still doing it today." To order a copy of Education - Teaching - Coaching: The Realities, The Challenges, The Rewards, visit www.amazon.com.

community. The award was established by David and Marilyn Rafferty in memory of their son, David A. Rafferty III, a member of the class of 1987.

Zanotti is a native of Asuncion, Paraguay. A sports medicine major, he graduated May 21 and will play professional basketball in Bologna, Italy for the team, Bipop Carire, Reggio Emilia.

He is the son of Amadeo Zanotti and Rosmary Barrail.

Andover resident Liza Fernanda Lopez recently received an honorable mention in the prestigious Emanuel and Lilly Shinagel Essay Prize competition from the Harvard Extension School in Cambridge.

A student in the Institute for English Language Programs, Lopez earned the honorable mention for her essay "My Experiences in English."

"English gives me another way to name the world; shows me another path to express my affections and helps me to structure another logic to understand this culture, which I like," wrote Lopez in her essay. "[Harvard] has given me the chance to improve my English and the possibility [of becoming] an English teacher when I go back to my country." Lopez is originally from Colombia.

The Harvard Institute for English Language Programs (IEL) assists students at all levels of proficiency in achieving the English skills they need to succeed in their jobs or courses of study. The IEL's noncredit courses prepare students to use English in academic and social contexts through contemporary readings, group and individual research projects, and oral and written assignments that incorporate issues from areas such as education, politics, and the environment.

Diana Vining, the daughter of Julia Hsia and Gary Vining, graduated summa cum laude from the University of Pennsylvania on May 15. She majored in visual studies and minored in architecture.

A graduate of Andover High, she will be taking part in the City Year program in New York City beginning this month.

Christine Tower of Andover, a junior biology major in the School of Health Sciences at Quinnipiac University in Hamden, Conn., was inducted into the Upsilon Omicron Chapter of the Beta Beta Beta Biological Society at a ceremony at Quinnipiac on April 23.

Beta Beta Beta (TriBeta) is a society for students, particularly undergraduates, dedicated to improving the understanding and appreciation of biological study and extending boundaries of human knowledge through scientific research. Awards are given for outstanding individual and chapter accomplishment.

LOCAL SCHOLARS

The Rotary Club of Andover announced the award of its Barbara Doran Scholarship to Carrie Pettee and its Rotary Club of Andover scholarship to Marisa Caliri.

Pettee, the Barbara Doran Scholar, was described by organizers as an outstanding Andover High School honors student who participated in sports and clubs and showed leadership throughout her high school years. Her involvement in Destination Imagination brought her and her teammates to the Global finals in Tennessee. Pettee was a member of the varsity hockey team, a ski instructor at Nashoba Valley, and a member of both the Recycling Club and Habitat for Humanity throughout her high school years.

Pettee reflected on her high school experience when she said, "I have learned to think more creatively for solutions to everyday challenges and that nothing is impossible." She will attend the University of Vermont this fall.

The Barbara Doran Scholarship was named after a Fleet-Bank vice president and a longtime community volunteer, activist and inspiration to many in her community. The club established this scholarship to honor Doran, an active leader and founding member of the club.

Caliri, who also attended Andover High School, won the Top Student Award in economics, and the Superintendent of Schools Certificate of Academic Excellence in her senior year. She was a cheerleader and captain of the cheerleading team. A National Honor Society member, Caliri will attend Johns Hopkins University in September.

At the recent award ceremony held by The Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth (CTY) to honor gifted children in eastern Massachusetts, Andover was well represented.

The honorees were invited to this awards ceremony sponsored by CTY (www.cty.jhu.edu) based on an exceptional performance on a rigorous, above-grade-level test given to fifth- through eighth-grade Talent Search participants. Seventh- and eighth-graders took the SAT or ACT — the same tests used for college admissions.

Fifth- and sixth-graders took the PLUS, a test similar to the SAT, scaled for younger students. Since 1979, CTY has sought the most academically able elementary- and middle-school students and encouraged their enrollment in the annual fall CTY Talent Search, open September through November. Students then test in December or January. The results of these tests reportedly give families a better idea of a child's academic talents, particularly in comparison with the thousands of other academically talented students in the Talent Search. Students can also earn recognition at CTY's awards ceremonies, and their test scores may qualify them for CTY's summer programs and distance education courses.

In 2005 alone, more than 83,000 students from 19 states and the District of Columbia participated in the Talent Searches offered through CTY. About 30 percent of the 16,500 fifth- and sixth-graders who tested this winter earned an invitation to CTY's Awards Ceremony, and about 25 percent of the more than 30,000 seventh- and eighth-grade testers earned an invitation to an awards ceremony.

Lea Ybarra, PhD, CTY's executive director, credits parents and educators for sharing in the honored students' accomplishments. "Parents who make academics a first priority for their children, and teachers who inspire their students to achieve their best, create engaged young people who are well-prepared to lead and shape tomorrow's world."

Massachusetts's Awards Ceremonies took place at Suffolk University on June 3 and June 4, and at Clark University on June 3.

This coming academic year, 177 Northern Essex Community College students will receive more than $125,000 in scholarships. Scholarships for 2006-07 range from $100 to $1,500 and come from a variety of sources, including memorial donations, local business and foundations. The students shown in the photo are all NECC scholarship recipients; 2006-07 scholarship recipients from Andover include: Elin Frank-Anderson, the Dr. John Spurr Memorial Scholarship; Jo-Anne Guillet, President Emeritus Harold Bentley Memorial Scholarship; Lynette Hickey, Janet Bourque Memorial Scholarship; Jarrett Mackin, Donald Pailles Memorial Scholarship; Stacy Morin, NECC Foundation Inc. Scholarship; and Quincy Torres, China Blossom Scholarship.

Tigers meditate in Thailand

Last week, we visited Owen and Mzee in Africa. This week, the Kid travels to Asia for the story of another interesting friendship.

The 4,400-mile trip from Kenya to Bangkok, Thailand takes eight hours.

From there, we travel 100 miles west to meet the Tiger Whisperer.

A procession of Buddhist monks walking 400-pound Indo-Chinese tigers greets us as we arrive at the forest monastery in Kanahanaburi. What are the gentle monks doing with fierce tigers?

Phusit Khantitharo is the abbot in charge of the monastery. He didn't plan to become a Dr. Doolittle. He gained a reputation of talking with animals by caring for hurt or abandoned wild and pet animals. He is best known for his ability with tigers.

Over a century ago, Buddhist monks would sit on tiger skins as they meditated. This symbolized their ability to conquer their fear and desire.

Mek's name means cloud.

Now the monks at the temple have conquered fear and created a rare sanctuary for endangered tigers.

The temple's first sick tiger cub arrived seven years ago. Phusit did not have the heart to turn away the sick baby. Other orphaned cubs followed.

"I only wanted to rescue the tigers, that's all," said Phusit.

He learned to nurse, feed and train them.

Every afternoon the monks and volunteer keepers walk the tigers to Tiger Valley to play. Tourists must walk behind and are reminded not to step on the tigers' tails.

The original cubs have grown and have cubs of their own, born at the monastery.

The monastery is called the Tiger Temple. It is home to 17 tigers and water buffaloes, gaurs, wild boars, barking deer, ponies and peacocks.

Tigers are the largest of the big cats. Adults weigh 500 pounds. They are fierce hunters. The beautiful golden-colored cats have black stripes for camouflage.

Over the past 100 years, 95% of Asia's tigers have disappeared. Three of the eight species of tigers have vanished and may be extinct.

The World Wildlife Fund estimates that there are fewer than 2,000 Indo-Chinese tigers. Only 5,000 to 7,000 tigers total still live in the wild.

The monks are building a "New Home for Tigers." The project will include a moat around 12 acres of jungle in the forest monastery. This will allow the tigers to roam freely in a place safe from poachers.

The tigers at the monastery have been raised around people. They have not learned to hunt so they cannot live in the wild.

With the new facility, tiger cubs can be trained to survive in the jungle. They can live in a more natural habitat.

Two GLTS Parents Nights set for Aug. 16-17 at NECC

With Northern Essex Community College in Lawrence as the setting, Greater Lawrence Technical School will offer two special Parents Nights on Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 16 and 17 from 5 to 8.

Helping high school students to become more successful is the theme of the event, especially designed for parents of Greater Lawrence Tech students entering grades 10, 11 and 12, or students who have left high school without passing the MCAS. Parents of other GLTS students are also welcome.

Workshop leaders from GLTS and NECC will discuss strategies parents can use to encourage their children to complete high school and set high personal goals, including college.

Bilingual support for Spanish-speaking parents will be offered through headsets and translators in all workshops.

Parents Night on Aug. 16 will include a welcome by Dr. Judy Ann DeLucia, Greater Lawrence Tech's new superintendent-director. On both nights, there will be refreshments, prizes and four workshops: What is MCAS and Why is it Important; Reggie 911: Self-Management Techniques; College Opportunities at Northern Essex Community College (including financial aid); and Earning A's: Attendance, Academics and Attitude, a session on school expectations and how parents can help their children meet those expectations.

Presenters will include Barbara Donaghue, director of curriculum and instruction (MCAS), Ralph Carrero, coordinator of student services (Earning A's), guidance counselor Phil Young-claus, (Reggie 911), and Northern Essex career, admissions, and financial aid representatives.

Parents Nights are part of the "Reggie Roadmap to Success," the initiative made possible by a Collaborative Success Plan grant from the Massachusetts Department of Education.

GLTS was one of five schools statewide to win the competitive grant, designed to increase student success through collaboration with community partners.

Northern Essex Community College and Frank Moran of Prudential First Choice Realty are the school's grant partners.

Grant activities have included visits to Central Maine Community College and NECC's Haverhill campus, motivational talks by successful area business people to students in the summer MCAS program; workshops presented by NECC; creation of a parent checklist; and the development of a Reggie Roadmap to Success booklet that will serve as a positive decision-making tool for students, and will also be posted on the school's Web site with links to community resources.

Under Armour Tourney

Jenn Russell was the only female from New England chosen to play in the Under Armour Lacrosse tournament. She will play lacrosse at the University of North Carolina in the fall.

O'Connell takes part in National Diving Championships

Katie O'Connell, who finished her freshman year at Andover High, qualified for the USA Junior Olympic National Diving Championships held July 7-9 in Moultrie, Ga.

She came in 35th in the nation. She did very well against a strong field from all over the country, her coaches said.

During the regional diving meet earlier this summer at Boston University, O'Connell scored a 230.90 in the one-meter event to qualify and place eighth. In the three-meter, O'Connell scored a 238.85, was the first alternate and placed ninth.

In May she placed second on 1M and 3M in the New England Championships, held at Boston University.

O'Connell is coached by Keith and Agnes Miller of Charles River Diving.

O'Connell will be a sophomore this fall and a member of the Andover High swim and dive team. Her brother, Andy O'Connell, is also ranked nationally — in gymnastics.

He will be a senior at AHS and is being looked at by a number of top gymnastic schools, such as Penn State, Ohio State and Michigan.

Mark Langone, a former Andover High pitching standout, is one of six inductees scheduled to enter the Stonehill College Hall of Fame on Oct. 13.

The 2000 Stonehill graduate was the Northeast-10 Conference Player of the Year as a junior, hitting .350 with seven homers.

He then hit .339 his senior year when the then-Chief-tains posted a school-record 34 wins.

On the mound the big righthander recorded 22 career victories.

WHAT'S UP contributor

Jenn Russell was the captain of the Brooks lacrosse, basketball and soccer teams, a three-time All-League, two-time New England All Star and two-time First Team All American. While she will leave behind many high school memories as she heads off to college, she'll be bringing her lacrosse stick with her.

Russell, an Andover resident and recent Brooks graduate, was the only female from New England chosen to play in the Under Armour All-American lacrosse tournament. The Under Armour All-American is a four-day tournament involving the 44 best senior girl lacrosse players in the country, according to organizers.

Although the girls' game was not televised on ESPN, like the boys' game was, many supportive fans, coaches, and family members turned up to watch the game. The girls were split into the North team and the South team, with the North pulling out a 15-12 win.

Russell has played lacrosse for five years — seriously for four — and collected a league MVP title and numerous other awards and scholarships during her high school career at Brooks, a private school in North Andover. One scholarship allows her to continue playing lacrosse at the University of North Carolina, which she will begin attending this fall.

"My coach at Brooks, Erin Carroll, motivated me throughout the lacrosse season. She really encouraged me to play," said Russell. "Once I started, I loved it and the game kept developing for me from there."

"She is an excellent athlete," said Floyd McManus, the Russells' family friend and retired principal at Doherty Middle School on Bartlett Street. "She was captain of Brook's basketball, soccer and lacrosse teams and excelled at every aspect of these sports. In a Boston newspaper it was said that the last four years at Brooks could be known as the Jenn Russell era. I wish her luck in college lacrosse and look forward to seeing where she can go from here."

12 years in the making

Peter Loosigian is one patient author

By Judy Wakefield

The late Benny Sayles, who was a well-known town character, had a 1948 Harley Davidson which he drove for 27 years. It was the envy of a young farm boy in town who longed to own it someday.

"He used to work around my dad's farm (on Lowell Street) so I knew him and I wanted so bad to buy that motorcycle. He stopped driving it in 1975, but he still wouldn't sell it (the motorcycle) to me," said Peter Loosigian, that young boy who would grow up to restore motorcycles while keeping in touch with Sayles to get his hands on that prized motorcycle.

Loosigian said Sayles finally sold him the motorcycle just weeks before his death [on Dec. 11, 2003]. And anyone who knows Loosigian will not be surprised to hear that he never gave up on getting that motorcycle, for which he happily made the sale.

He describes himself as a "very patient" person which is clearly illustrated in his Sayles story as he waited many years for that motorcycle.

Now, that patient side of his personality is showing clearly once again. This time, it's an author goal for him. It's not surprising to learn that Loosigian, who now lives in Pelham, N.H., just self-published his first book, which he has been working on for the past 12 years. Waiting for Willie just came out after a laborious writing journey for Loosigian. But this author hung in there as his mind was made up and he wanted to write a book.

First, Loosigian's notes were kept together with a paper clip as story pieces came to his mind at various times. Then, a three-ring binder replaced the paper clip.

"It was 10 years ago when I decided to buckle down and really get serious about my writing," he said. "I would bring that three-ring binder everywhere, including vacations."

Eventually, a home computer took over and his wife learned to type. A manuscript was born. The typical author search for a publisher followed and after a year with no luck, Loosigian decided to self-publish his story about Willie.

Willie is a farm boy who goes to college and heads for the open road on a motorcycle after graduation. Neglecting his family eventually makes him feel very guilty and his story emphasizes his emotions of guilt while he figures out what he really wants in life. His farm family keeps tugging at him throughout the story.

While Willie's life parallels the author's life, the book is not autobiographical. Loosigian said he drew from many people in his life, but the book and its characters are fictitious.

"I think Willie is truly believable," Loosigian said of his lead book character. "And, so are the other characters although some of them are not liked."

"There are no ghosts, no murders or anything in this book, but this story is believable. It's a story about people and life... and, I think readers will be sorry when the book ends. You will want more," he said.

Loosigian makes his living as a home inspector as he owns Black Hawk Home Inspection. He visits his hometown of Andover every day as he likes to check in with his 85-year-old father, also named Peter, who still works on his Lowell Street farm.

In addition to motorcycle restoration, he enjoys woodworking and working with stained glass.

This book has been his project for the past 12 years, and finally seeing it at Andover Bookstore is very gratifying for Loosigian. The price is $14.95.

The book is also available for sale online at www.gagehillpress.com.

Historian and author in Andover

On Thursday, Aug. 24 at 7 p.m., Thomas Bender will be at the Massachusetts School of Law to discuss his new book, A Nation Among Nations - America's Place in World History.

Bender's new book is a provocative work that shows us why American history must put firmly in the proper global context by arguing that domestic developments in America have their roots in a larger, more expansive international historical narrative.

The public is invited to attend and admission is free. No reservations are required. Light refreshments will be served beginning at 6:30 p.m.

For more information about future events at MSLAW visit www.mslaw-events.com

Journalist to speak about eminent domain

Tomorrow, Friday, August 11 at 2:30 p.m., Steven Greenhut, a reporter with the Orange County Register (Calif.), will be at the Massachusetts School of Law to discuss his new book, Abuse of Power: How the Government Misuses Eminent Domain with Dean Lawrence R. Velvel.

The public is invited to attend and admission is free. No reservations are required. Light refreshments will be served beginning at 2 p.m. For more information about future events at MSLAW, 500 Federal St. in Andover, visit www.mslawevents.com, or call 978-681-0800.

Andover native Catherine Meeks sketches an outline for a painting in a field. Her work was on display during Yankee Homecoming in Newburyport, through last night, Wednesday.

Andover artist's work shown in Newburyport

Megan Richards

WHAT'S UP contributor

CATHERINE MECKS, Andover native and accomplished artist, is changing the way New Englanders view their surroundings this summer. Meeks' portfolio is made up of mostly New England coastal landscape paintings, which portray the beauty of ordinary New England scenes.

Her artwork was shown recently at two different venues in Newburyport.

From July 29 through Aug. 6 her paintings were on display at the Newburyport Yankee Homecoming and from Aug. 3 through 9 she was a featured artist at the Newburyport Art Association.

The NAA features different talented emerging artists and displays their work for a week. Meeks, along with her friend and fellow painter, Cathy Garnett, were chosen as this past week's featured artists.

Although Garnett's paintings also are landscapes, she uses watercolors in her art while Meeks' paintings are mainly in pastel, the different mediums adding contrast and originality to the exhibit.

These coastal paintings will be displayed at South Portland on Aug. 12 and in Andover's Art in the Park in September.

"I grew up in an artistic family. I was the youngest of three sisters," said Meeks.

"I thought everybody was an artist. I think my sisters and I all have talent but we work in different ways with different mediums. I was following in my sisters' footsteps. I knew from the time I was a little girl that painting was something that I wanted to do."

Although Meeks has been interested in art for most of her life, she has been painting seriously only for the past 10 years.

"I get inspired to paint just by driving around," said Meeks. "There's a painting flying by every second but it's hard work for me to filter out what I can actually paint out of all the scenes that I want to paint. No matter the season, there's always something beautiful to admire and it's extremely rewarding to try to capture its beauty for others to admire as well."

Residents interested in viewing Meeks' artwork can visit her Web site at www.artisticsisters.com.

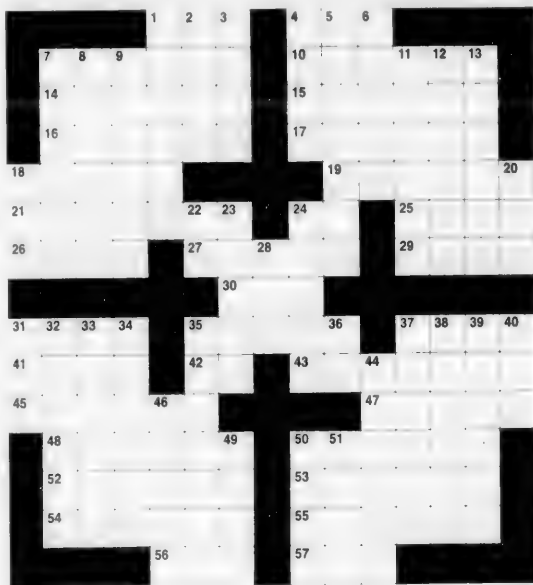

The Park at Bartlet and Chestnut streets will be filled with sounds of jazz, swing, ragtime, Dixieland, rock and popular favorites next Wednesday, Aug. 16, beginning at 6 p.m., as Quintessential Brass continues the DCS summer music series in the Park. See story on page 20.

Maddox Chiropractic
Chiropractic ... Before You Play!

Just about every sport provides some health benefits; however, not all activity offers the same advantages. As an example, jogging, skiing, rugby, wrestling, dance and the martial arts are excellent body conditioners. However, from a chiropractic point of view, these activities may be strenuous on the joints, ligaments and the spinal column. Jogging reduces tension, improves our ability to deliver oxygen to various parts of the body, and improves blood circulation. On the other hand, jogging can also jar the body, particularly the spine, and lead to subluxations (spinal misalignment). While we do not discourage these forms of exercise, we do advise the "weekend sports warrior" to avoid over-exertion and to have a complete spinal examination before participating in any sports.

A spinal exam can determine if there are physical limitations present that may increase your risk of injury. Chiropractic corrects subluxations, conditions the muscles and promotes total healing of soft tissue. That's how chiropractic improves muscle balance and coordination, which ultimately, helps to prevent injury. Every sport - from fishing to football - involves body mechanics! Chiropractic restores and maintains proper dynamics of motion. And whether you're doing backyard cartwheels, riding bikes, or bowling - you rely on the proper dynamics of body movement to avoid injuries and to achieve "peak performance."

Strains, sprains and other common injuries are often caused by faulty joint mobility. A joint with restricted movement will not only be more easily sprained, but it will also place increased demands on other joints, rendering them more susceptible to injury.

Chiropractic care can help improve athletic performance by enhancing joint function and balancing muscle coordination. Your body is like a finely tuned machine. The better your parts move together, the more efficient your performance will be.

The integration of your bony structures and supportive soft tissues keeps your body balanced! Chiropractic puts it together for your good health.

Call Maddox Chiropractic at 978-557-8200 to set up an appointment. The office is located at 180 River Road, 1/2 mile from exit 45 Route 93.

Quintet's horns to hit the Park

Quintessential Brass to play DCS concert in Andover

NEXT WEDNESDAY, Aug. 16, at 6 p.m., the Park at Bartlet and Chestnut streets will be filled with sounds of jazz, swing, ragtime, Dixieland, rock and popular favorites as Quintessential Brass continues the summer music series in the Park.

Quintessential Brass is a professional brass quintet that has been performing in churches, schools, concert halls, bandstands and gazebos across New England since 1990. The group consists of five full-time professional musicians who have, individually, performed with groups such as the Albany Symphony, Boston Philharmonic, Hartford Symphony, Portland Symphony, Springfield Symphony, Pro Arte Chamber Orchestra and big name acts, such as Tony Bennett, Natalie Cole, Kenny Rogers, Frankie Valli and countless others. They have recorded CDs, traveled the world with famous orchestras and musicians, performed for President Bill Clinton, and at venues such as Carnegie Hall, the Kennedy Center, Lincoln Center and Tanglewood. They have released two CDs: Miscellanea and A Quintessential Christmas and are enjoying a successful year, having recently performed at some desirable venues, such as the Tower Hill Botanical Gardens, the Rotch Jones-Duff House and Garden Museum, the St. Gaudens Estate and National Historic Site and a live WICN radio broadcast of their concert at Mechanics Hall in Worcester.

They have also had a short tour of Vermont, and were so well received that some venues have already asked them back for next summer.

They draw on a repertoire of classical, jazz, swing, ragtime, Dixieland, rock, Latin and popular favorites with musical spoofs, parodies and high-jinks. Their current repertoire highlights American composers, groups and musicians, featuring the music of Leonard Bernstein, George Gershwin, Charles Ives, Arthur Pryor, John Williams, Stevie Wonder, the Beach Boys, the Big Band Era, music from TV and movies, and other surprises. They offer many different kinds of programs, including educational programs, and are experienced in entertaining audiences of all ages.

The Quintessential Brass concert is supported by a grant from the Andover Cultural Council, a state agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council. Four Guys in Tuxes, the last DCS concert of the season, will play at the bandstand on Wednesday, Aug. 23 from 6:15 to 7:45 p.m.

Andover pediatrician honored

Robert Nelken, M.D., FAAP, was honored recently at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics for his initiatives through the Suspected Child Abuse and Neglect Committee and Child Death Review Board, according to the state chapter.

Nelken is a pediatrician in Andover.

Basket winners

Andover Business Center Association acknowledged the people who supported its first ever ABCA Scholarship Raffle, which was associated with the rain-shortened Andover Days earlier this summer. The scholarship winner was Mike Besser, who will attend the University of Maryland in the fall. The Lucky Raffle Basket winners and their prizes were as follows:

- Kathy Vegina, "A John Hardy Pie";
- Eileen Holtzman, "Dining with style at home";
- Tracey Callahan, "Park Street shopping spree";
- Lisa Schwarz, "Home Sweet Home";
- Diane Hender, "water color house portrait";
- Amy Sebell, "Family Fun";
- Ellen Powers, "For Teens";
- Matt McConnell, "For Him";
- Lucille Fortier, "Dining Out in Andover"; and
- Pru Dooley, "Good Sport."

Chairwoman Betsy Powers of "Culinary Concepts" and her assistant Rosemary Radulski of Butler Bank said merchants were generous with donations.

Boys & Girls Club donation

The Lawrence Boys and Girls Club was among the recipients of $55,000 in donations from Woburn-based eWeek magazine.

Andover resident Eric Lundquist, eWeek's editorial director, made the donations as part of the publication's sixth annual eWeek Excellence Awards. Those awards recognize technology companies providing innovative products and services for business users.

"When we created the awards program we not only wanted to recognize innovative technology companies but also to recognize and support innovative community-based organizations which help youth, and in particular disadvantaged youth, gain access to technology. We wanted to do our bit to help bridge the digital divide. If the US is going to remain competitive in the world marketplace, then we must develop a generation of youth who are not only excited about using technology but are also excited about developing technology," said Lundquist.

Lundquist presented checks for $15,000 each to the Boys and Girls Clubs in Lawrence, Mass., East Harlem, N.Y., and San Francisco, Calif. An additional $10,000 donation was made to the Boys and Girls Club Katrina Fund designated to clubs damaged by Hurricane Katrina.

Lundquist lives in Andover with his wife, Sherry, and four children.

Conference for CBRB agents

Several Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage agents from the Andover office attended the annual Coldwell Banker International Business Conference in San Francisco earlier this year. They were Nuala Boness, Carla Burns, Dodie Gemmell, Maureen Keller, Ellen Munick, Sandra Pinkham, Tom Papineau, Gretchen Papineau, Joan Ponti, and Kal Shetty. Qualifying but unable to attend was Bunny Maren.

Sour Grapes: Liquor store owners hope to stomp on Question 1

By Brian Davidson

IF MASSACHUSETTS VOTERS say "Yes" to Question 1 on the November statewide ballot, local residents may be able to buy their wine and cheese with their milk and eggs.

The Wine at Food Stores Initiative, backed by supermarket chains such as Stop-and-Shop and Shaws, aims to expand the sale of wine to grocery, big box retail and convenience stores, which would nearly double the amount of liquor licenses in the state.

Although the new licenses would only be for selling wine, a group of liquor store owners from around the state worry that if Question 1 passes, beer and liquor licenses will soon be flowing too.

"The main concern is that next it's going to be beer and then it's going to be liquor," said Cristin Brown, spokeswoman for the Wine Merchants and Concerned Citizens for SAFETY (Stopping Alcohol's Further Extension To Youth). "They're starting with wine because it seems more benign to people."

A representative from the Wine at Food Stores Initiative did not return a phone call, but the group's Web site says a state law enacted in 1934 prevents most grocery stores from selling wine, and, "as a result, it forces Massachusetts consumers to pay an estimated 26 to 36 million each year in higher prices for bottled wine." A total of 34 other states allow grocery stores to sell wine, according to the Web site.

But one local liquor store owner says the initiative is just another case of the "McDonaldization" of society.

"It's a move by the large corporations to push out the mom-and-pops stores," said Brian McGann, owner of Driscoll's Package Store on Bartlet Street.

"What happened to your local

Brian McGann, owner of Driscoll's Package Store on Bartlet Street, says that local liquor stores should not have to compete with grocery stores, whose owners want to begin selling wine.

hardware store? It doesn't exist — now you have to drive out to Home Depot and Lowe's."

McGann argues that if a grocery store selling wine cheaper than local liquor stores put them out of business, the prices at the grocery store would eventually go up because there would no longer be competition.

Liquor store owners statewide have formed a group to counter the Wine at Food Stores Initiative, but they say saving their own businesses aren't their only reasons for doing so.

The Wine Merchants and Concerned Citizens for SAFETY say that doubling the amount of liquor licenses in the state is dangerous because the initiative would not include any funding for increased enforcement or safety measures.

Such measures include setting up sobriety checkpoints for drivers, and liquor store sting operations to discourage stores from selling alcohol to minors.

"Obviously when you increase the number of alcohol outlets, you are going to increase the numbers of alcohol-related incidents and accidents," said Brown.

Brown said liquor stores in the state are usually monitored by police a couple of times each year. More stores with liquor licenses will mean that fewer stores will be monitored, she said, adding that grocery stores are more likely to sell alcohol to minors.

"Liquor store owners know they have a responsibility to stop underage drinking," said Brown. "Their livelihoods are dependent upon their ability to sell alcohol, so they aren't going to screw it up."

McGann said he is aware that police set up stings, but never knows when they are conducted at his store because he has never fallen for one.

"We know our customers," he said. "Whereas at the supermarket, you're going to have young kids behind the registers ID-ing people."

"It's a move by the large corporations to push out the mom-and-pops stores."

Local commercial real estate seminar

The Commercial Banking Group of the Savings Bank recently hosted a seminar with New England Business Finance which focused on the Small Business Administration's 504 Program. During the seminar, the attendees from local businesses learned about the program that allows businesses to finance 90 percent of commercial owner-occupied real estate and equipment with a portion of the financing having a fixed rate for 20 years.

New look at Andover's Courtyard by Marriott

The 146-room Courtyard by Marriott in Andover has recently completed a major renovation of its guest rooms, lobby and public spaces. The enhancements are based on feedback from hotel guests and are part of Courtyard's "nationwide hotel reinvention," according to Marriott International Inc.

"Courtyard was launched based on the needs and desires of business travelers and now we are reinventing the brand on the basis of new customer research and recent product testing. Our updated design concepts provide greater comfort and functionality to our guests," said Mike Jannini, executive vice president, brand management, Marriott International.

The new guest rooms and public space have been upgraded with the addition of functional enhancements and new décor and furnishings. Practical additions such as the Market, a 24/7 food and beverage pantry, and business library, featuring individual workstations with high-speed data ports and ergonomic chairs combine with aesthetic elements including the use of curved surfaces, rich woods, designer fabrics, granite counters and superior lighting, according to the company.

In guest rooms, a desk on wheels has been added to provide increased workspace. New task lighting and extra power outlets have been added.

BEANIES FOR BAGHDAD

Gas station gifts meant for Iraqi kids who 'have never seen a toy'

By Michelle Wiener
WHAT'S UP contributor

Inside the Shawsheen Sunoco station on North Main Street is a box decorated with pictures of smiling children holding Beanie Babies. It holds a large collection of the stuffed animals, which will be delivered to children in Baghdad by US soldiers, as part of the Beanies for Baghdad program.

Beanies for Baghdad began three years ago when now Lt. Col. Jim Barker, who was and is still, serving with the US Army in Iraq received the Beanie called "Courage" from his sister and nephew. He gave Courage to a young Iraqi girl named Sara - and the idea for the Beanies for Baghdad program was born. The program has seen a huge international and national response.

"The youngest casualties of war are the children," said Debbie Curtin, whose husband, Steve, owns the Andover gas station. "It's like anything. If you have any kind of upheaval in your life, you address it with the children and try to stem the negativity. The Beanies will be over in Iraq and have good memories going with them."

The Curtins first became involved with Beanies for Baghdad when they teamed with Londonderry, N.H., teens run a drive in the Londonderry schools. Debbie Curtin said they decided to launch another drive this summer, which includes the Shawsheen Sunoco, to help keep the war on people's minds.

"Kids will have [the Beanies] long after our soldiers are there, and when things return to normal, the good, positive memories of the soldiers and our country will foster continuing peace and good feelings towards the US," she said. "Children are the ones who are caught in the middle [of war]. They're the ones without a voice. So if we can offer a little friendship, say we're not the bad guys..."

The Curtins and several teens began this summer's drive by getting together and decorating collection boxes. These were then distributed around Londonderry, at the Sunoco station, and even to employees in the transportation security administration of the Manchester airport, where Debbie Curtin works. (The box also gets donations from anyone traveling through the airport.)

Contributions of Beanies, as well as other toys and supplies useful for children, are sent to soldiers in Iraq who then pass out the items to the children they encounter daily, many of whom, writes Barker in a letter on BeaniesForBaghdad.com, "have never seen a toy."

The Curtins plan on continuing the collection until Sept. 11. After that, the Beanies will be shipped to Iraq. To help offset the cost of mailing the boxes, the Curtins' daughter Amy has designed Red Sox decals which are being sold at the Sunoco station.

Residents can drop off Beanie Babies at the Sunoco station on North Main Street. Soldiers will distribute the items to Iraqi children.

Hurricane season always carries a special meaning since 1938

Bill Dalton

On Wednesday, Sept. 21, 1938, Andover and New England took a beating from an immense and vicious hurricane. It was called the "Great New England Hurricane," "The Hurricane of '38," and "The Long Island Express." In an earlier column I did for the Townsmen, I wrote about Hurricane Carol, which caused serious destruction in 1954. Those who remember both hurricanes in Andover say that the '38 storm was more frightening and damaging.

The Hurricane of '38 and Carol had a similarity, besides the high winds and rains: the eyes of both storms passed to our west, leaving Andover on the dangerous eastern semicircle of the storms. All storms in the Northern Hemisphere have a counter-clockwise rotation, meaning that hurricanes to our west have their wind speed increased by their forward motion. The hurricane of '38 had a freakish forward speed of 50 to 70 miles per hour, a speed never equaled before or after, which added to its already devastating winds.

Although Carol had been powerful, it was small in diameter and had a narrow destruction path. The Great Hurricane was a giant in comparison to most hurricanes. As Hurricane Carol approached there was adequate notice for anyone caring to heed it. Its forward speed was in the normal range of storms, 10 to 20 miles per hour, and it was carefully tracked by experts. Boston television weatherman Don Kent, who became the national model for aspiring television weathermen and women, became a star because of his coverage of Carol. He tracked the storm, and gave articulate warnings. Folks in Andover had ample opportunity to get home and prepare.

The Great Hurricane of '38 came with no warning to the public.

In her book, Sudden Sea, The Great Hurricane of 1938 (Little, Brown, 2003) author R.A. Scotti states that the storm was the worst natural disaster in United States history up to its time. She argues that "...although other disasters had claimed more lives, when all factors are taken together - the number of lives lost; the number of states, families, and industries affected; the breadth of the storm; the physical and social changes to the area; and the dollar cost - as of 1938, no natural disaster had been as terrible as this hurricane."

Whether she is correct or not, the storm is among the worst natural disasters in North America, greater even than the San Francisco earthquake and fire. The Hurricane of '38 killed more than 690 people, and seriously injured almost 1,800. Five-thousand homes were destroyed, 15,000 seriously damaged; 20,000 power poles fell, and 2,600 cars were ruined. In today's money, the storm caused damage estimated at between 5 and 20 billion dollars. Entire communities in southern Rhode Island and Connecticut were washed away forever, and the shoreline of Rhode Island was permanently changed. If a similar hurricane hit the area today, the damages would be multiples of those numbers.

It is commonly believed that the storm couldn't be predicted. Not true. The storm was monitored by meteorologists based on reports from official weather stations and ships at sea. It had been on a course to hit Florida. It didn't, and like many hurricanes, turned north. Then, it was predicted to give Cape Hatteras a blow before sliding northeast causing possible gale winds to Long Island and Cape Cod before expiring over the North Atlantic.

This is a usual path for hurricanes that come up the East Coast. The cause of this usual path is the "Bermuda High," that sits over Bermuda during the hurricane season. This high pushes hurricanes into a slot near the southeastern coast of the US and then allows them to slide north of the high pressure and move away from the coast. Although hurricanes are particularly capricious in southern latitudes, they are more predictable as they rotate around the Bermuda High. So, what went meteorologically wrong in 1938? The Bermuda high moved north of its usual position, forcing the hurricane to continue north instead of northeast, and the barometric pressures over New England were low because of an inland rain that had soaked the region. It was one of the wettest summers on record. The atmospheric pressures on Sept. 21, 1938 invited, perhaps forced, the Great Hurricane to wreck New England. In fact, everything worked in favor of destruction; it was the time of the autumnal equinox with its higher-than-normal high tides. Worse, the hurricane's landfall would occur just before high tide, and the wet summer meant that the ground and rivers already were filled with water.

One junior forecaster in the meteorology center in Washington predicted the storm would hit New England. He was ignored by his boss. At least one ship south of New England had reported the storm; the experts, including that boss, ignored the report. Besides, for reasons not fully understood, the forward motion of the storm reached historical proportions, fooling the experts as to where the storm was; they had lost the storm.

And, the last great hurricane in New England had been in 1815, so why would an expert be so brave as to predict that this '38 hurricane would be unlike the hundreds of hurricanes that had scooted off to New England's east?

It was partly cloudy and breezy on Long Island that Wednesday morning, a rather pleasant day compared to what had been before. Because of the hurricane's speed, Long Island's weather went from fair to heinous within 150 minutes. Fifty people died over the sparse east end of the island.

The eye of the storm passed there about 3 p.m., and headed up the Connecticut River Valley. The dangerous eastern semicircle hit Rhode Island just prior to high tide, killing at least 433 people, including many children coming home from school. A school bus was overturned by the wind and most of the trapped victims drowned. In the town of Westerly, R.I., 100 people died. The 17-foot storm surge occurred so quickly that people went from being entertained by the beauty of the surf to having their houses washed away within minutes, perhaps seconds. Observers reported seeing a tidal wave so big they thought it was a fog bank, and it instantly destroyed hundreds of beach homes. Some stretches of beach were so swept clean of dwellings that there was no evidence of them the next day. The impact of the wave was so huge that it registered on seismographs more than 3,000 miles away. The ocean's surge funneled up the Narragansett Bay and into Providence, hitting at rush hour. In minutes, the downtown was buried in over 13 feet of water, higher than the flood caused by the Great Hurricane of 1815. Several people trapped in their cars drowned. Dozens of pedestrians were tossed along flooded streets as people in buildings above them watched in disbelief horror. The looting that followed the flood was so bad that police ignored it. In New London, Conn., the storm caused a fire that burned much of the business district. As the storm passed through Connecticut, 97 people were killed. Along the south coast beaches of New England, most houses were closed for the summer or else the death toll would have been in the thousands.

The hurricane was 500 miles wide. The devastation and destruction stretched from the Berkshires to the coast, and the storm moved so fast that its winds barely dissipated until it had gone far into New Hampshire, Vermont, and finally Quebec. When it went by the Blue Hills Observatory in Milton, the gusts blew as high as 183 mph, with sustained winds over 120 mph. Winds were so strong that people caught outside had their clothing ripped from their bodies. In Gloucester, observers reported waves as high as 50 feet. Eighty-eight people were killed in Massachusetts alone.

Andover had no fatalities or reports of serious injury, but it lost hun-
